

Neil
Armstrong's
Journal

By: Arthur Andrist

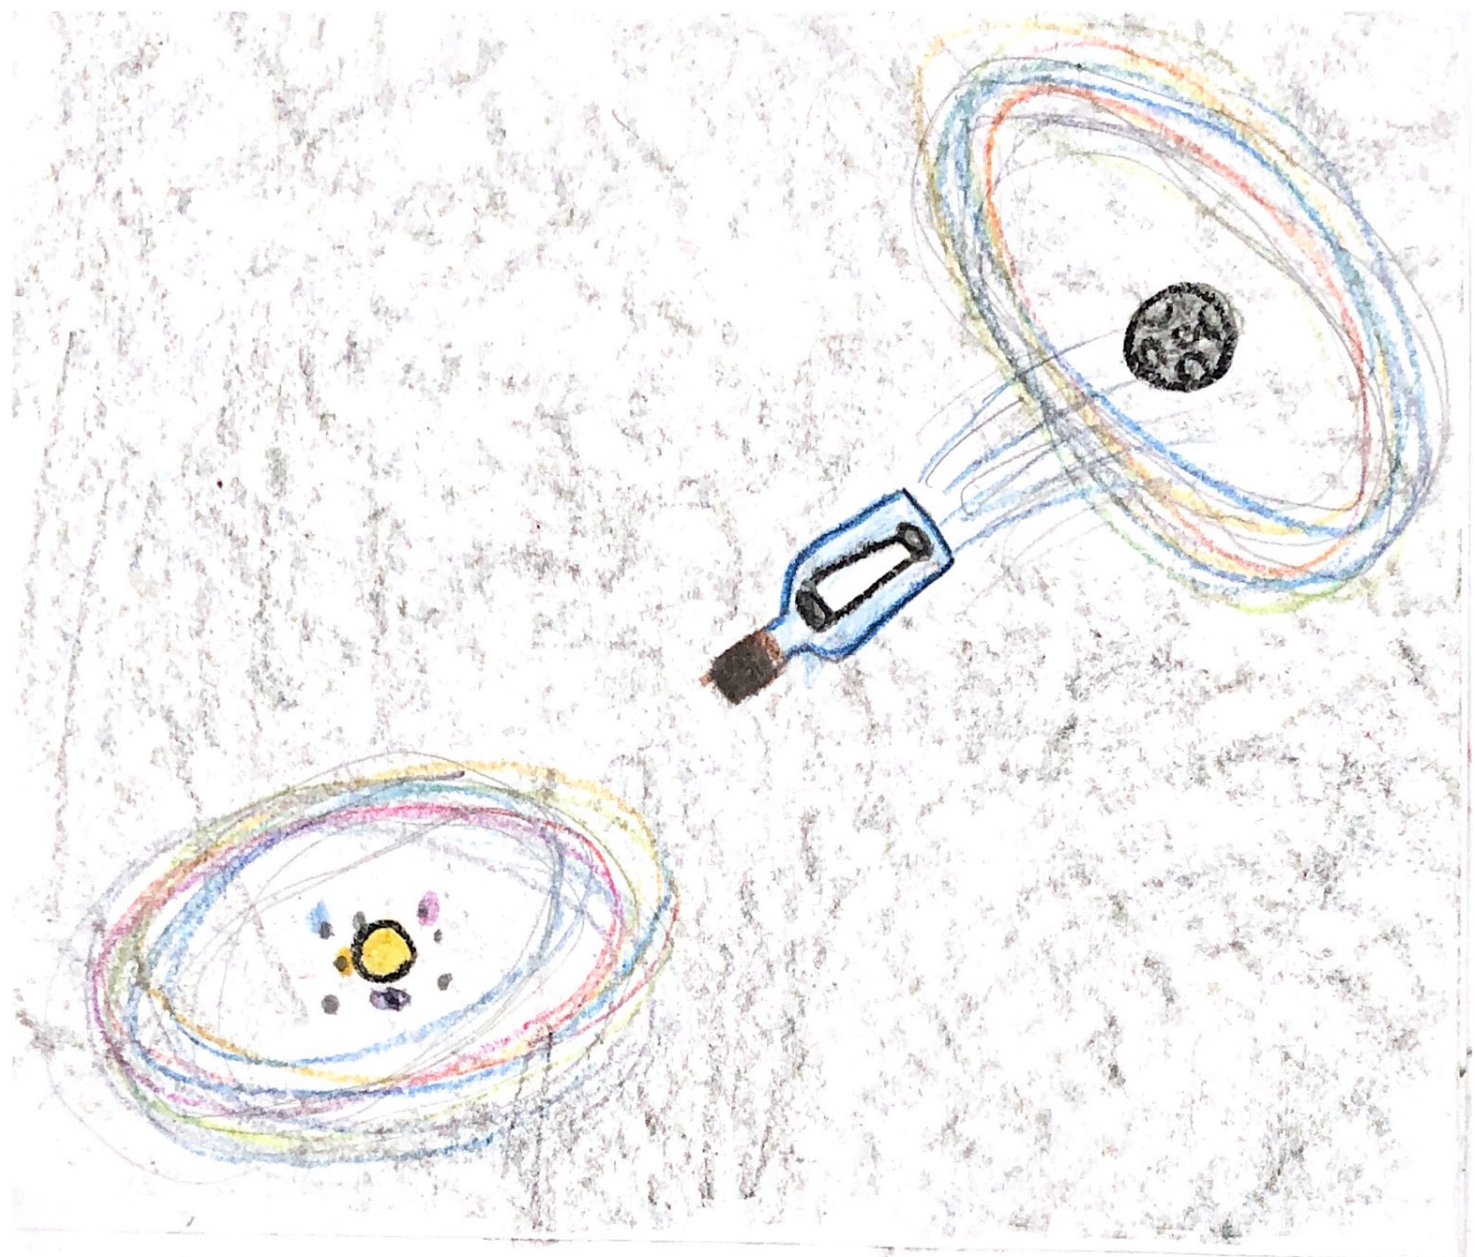

July 20, 1970

Dear Journal,

I can't believe it's been a year since I put the flag on the moon! It's so cool to be in space again. NASA wanted me to explore a new planet called Merth. Merth is located in the Silky Way Galaxy... far, far away from the Milky Way Galaxy. It takes forever to get here!

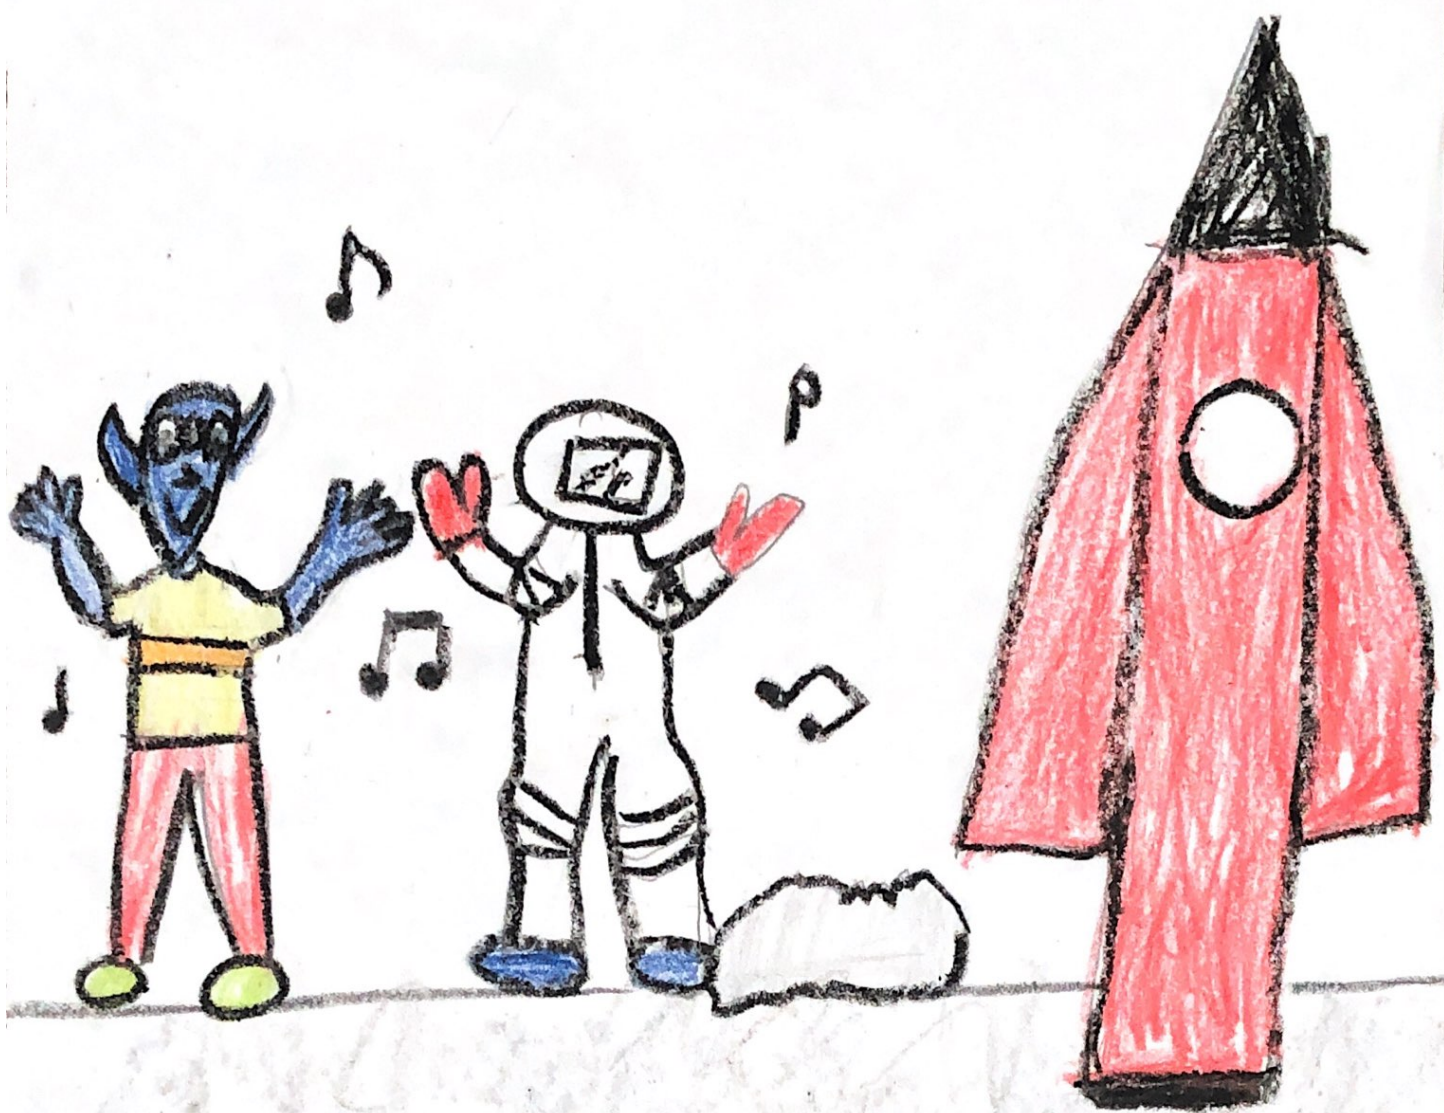

The aliens who live on Merth are called Mumans. They look just like humans except they have blue skin, pointy chins and noses, three bulging eyes, and they love to break-dance. They speak English, but with a British accent.

The Commander of the Mumans threw a message in a bottle that flew all the way to the White House. The President read the message that asked for help because the Mumans were running out of food to eat. The President called NASA, and they came up with a plan to send me in to space with supplies to build greenhouses.

When I landed on Morth, it felt familiar because it looks like Earth's moon. After we did some break-dancing, we got to work. First I showed them how to build the greenhouses. Then I showed the Mummies how to plant fruits and vegetables and take care of them so they could keep growing their own food. Now they won't go hungry again. 4

Even though it's been a fun trip, I'm excited to leave in a few hours to go back home to Earth and see my family. The Commander of the Mummies gave me a Mummy rock for NASA to study, and we break-danced to say goodbye.

I hope I have a safe trip home,
Neil Armstrong