

The Spy who saved Candy

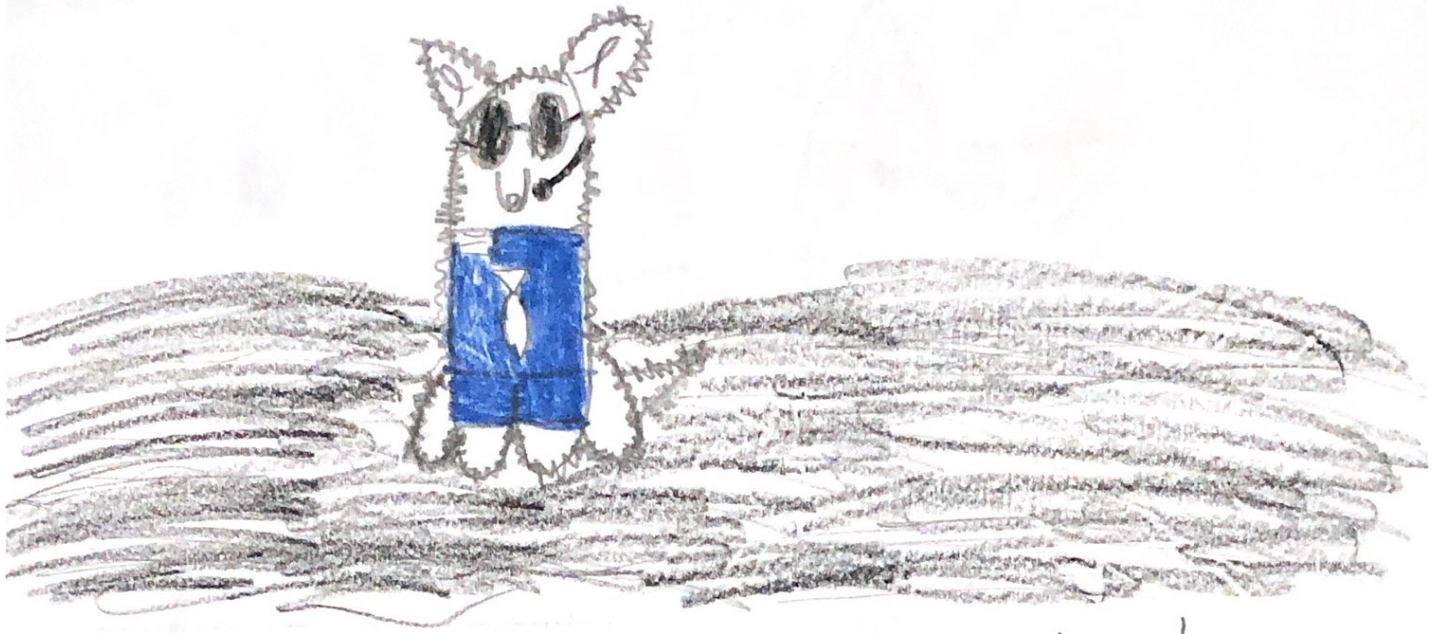

By Maria Kamrud

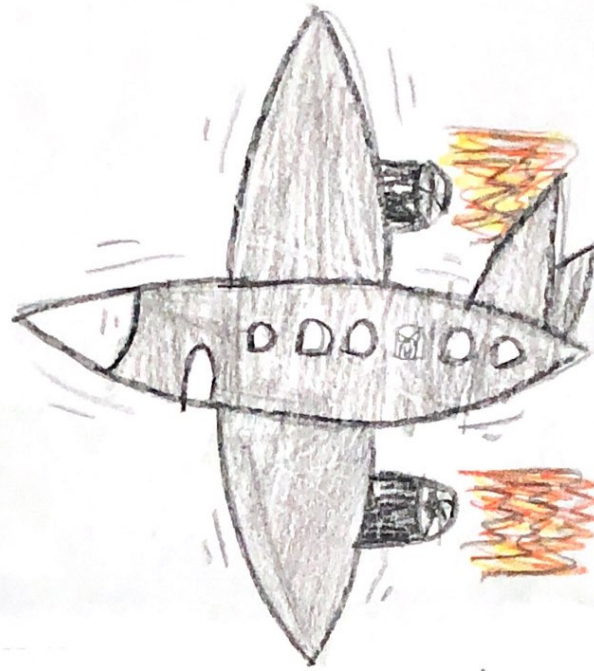

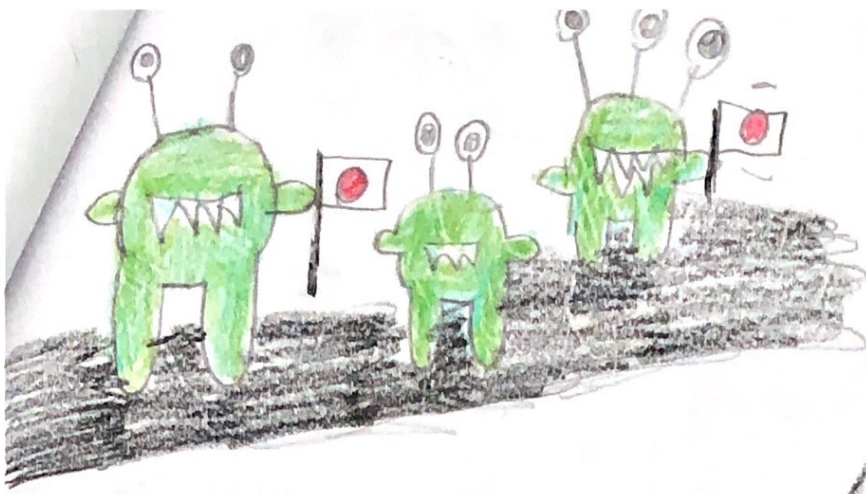

Once there was a spirited dog named James Bone who worked for a spy agency. His boss Emma Chew had discovered that aliens were planning to steal all the candy in the whole wide world.

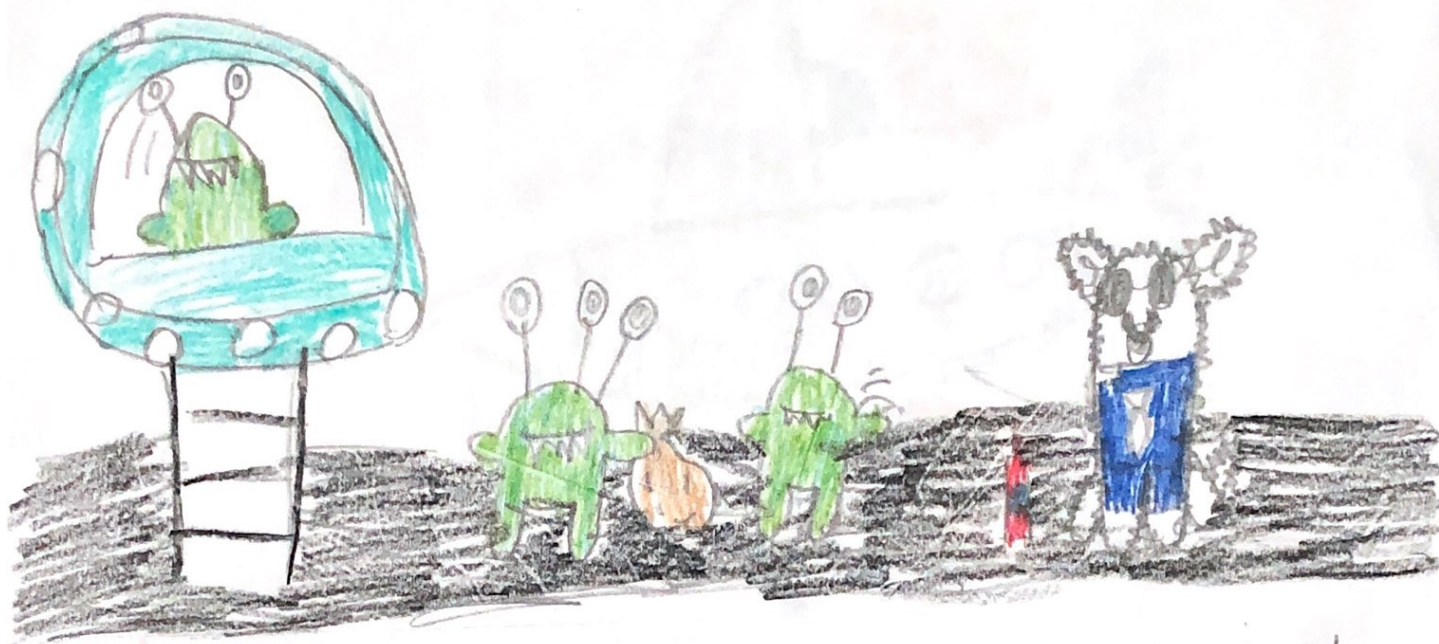

When James heard this he knew he had to go on an undercover mission to save all the candy in the world.

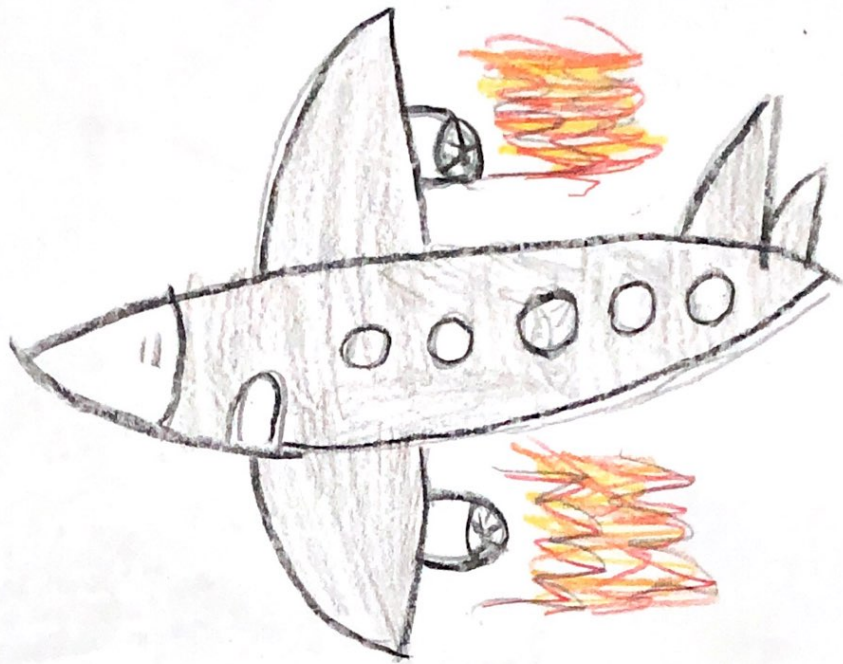

And that James would need to take his speedy private jet to get there.

He asked Emma Chew where the aliens were going first. She said that the aliens were going to Japan and that James would need to take his speedy private jet to get there.

When he got there he took out what aliens hate most, bug spray. But when he looked up, he saw that he was too late. The aliens were just leaving Japan and the candy banks had been robbed.

He called Emma Chew on his walkie-talkie. She said that he should follow them. James followed the aliens and saw that they were planning to go to South Korea. James took a short cut and ended up there before the aliens arrived.

He made a trap out of net and the aliens UFO landed right in the middle of it. The UFO couldn't break through the trap. James Bone opened the UFO door and saw three fat aliens that were lying around empty candy wrappers.

James put a vegetable bomb in the UFO one minute later the UFO was filled with all kinds of vegetables. James restored the stolen candy and the his phone rang it was Emma Chew with his next mission.