A brief history of the St. Louis Teen Talent Competition

Mary Strauss, co-owner of the Fox Theatre, wanted to give the opportunity for St. Louis' talented teens to perform on the Fox stage. In 1985, long before "America's Got Talent" and "American Idol" Mary created the St. Louis Teen Talent Showcase to annually recognize and encourage talented teenagers in the performing arts to compete, win prizes and scholarships, and performance opportunities. The competition selection process and final event on the Fox stage gave participants the anticipation, hard work, and thrill of a Broadway show! Fast forward 31 years when Mary Strauss became President of the Fox Performing Arts Charitable Foundation's board, she felt the time was right to revive Teen Talent and in 2011 produced their 1st Annual St. Louis Teen Talent Competition at the Fox Theatre.
