

The Magic Bird

Story and illustrated by:
Welinnah Oakes

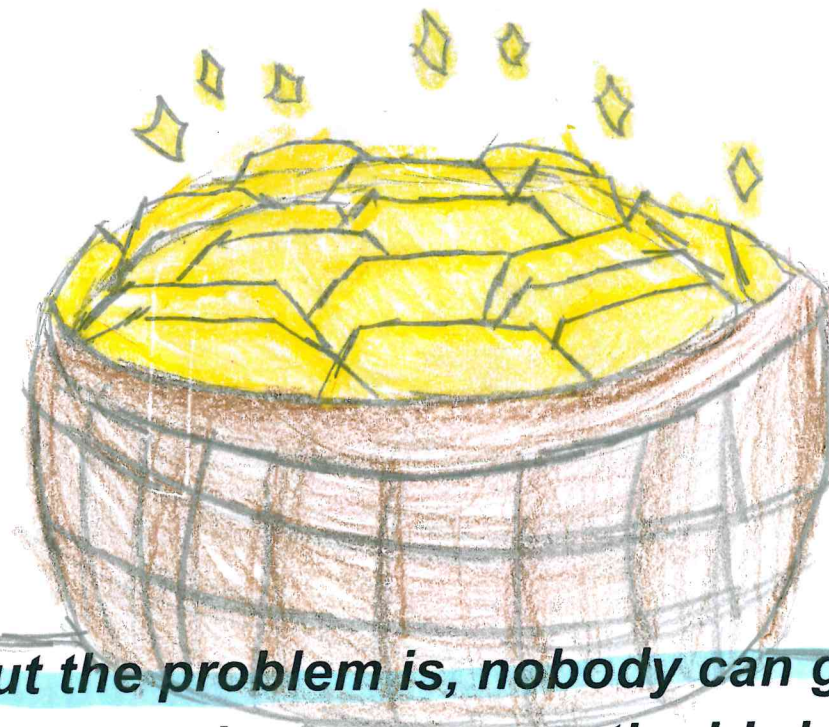

Once upon a time, there was a magical bird in the forest. When the bird sings it can heal sick people. If somebody is sick and hear the magical voice of the bird it will get better.

One day, the Princess in the castle got sick. The king was worried and heard the news about the magic bird in the forest. So, he ordered his people to find the bird and make his daughter feel better.

Many people wanted to get the bird for the king because of the big reward. Who ever can bring the bird to the king will be given a basket of gold.

But the problem is, nobody can get the bird that easy because once the bird poop and touches the human body it will turn into stone.

Only a person with a kind heart can get the bird. And will not turn into stone if you have a good heart.

Many tried to get the bird. Some of them turned into stone and never came back.

The king started to get worried and become sad as the princess is still sick. He wanted to tell all the people in the palace about the prize.

In the palace, there lived a very simple and kind girl named Elizabeth. She heard the news and the award who can bring the bird to the king. Elizabeth went to the forest and look for the bird.

Elizabeth started to look for the bird and she heard the bird singing so wonderful. When she gets closer to the bird, the bird just goes to her so quick. Elizabeth was so happy because she never turned into a stone.

Elizabeth walks to the castle very happy with the bird. She gives it to the king and the king was very happy too.

"Thank you so much"! the King said to Elizabeth. "I will give you the reward now."
When the bird started to sing the Princess is never sick anymore.

