

The Haunted House

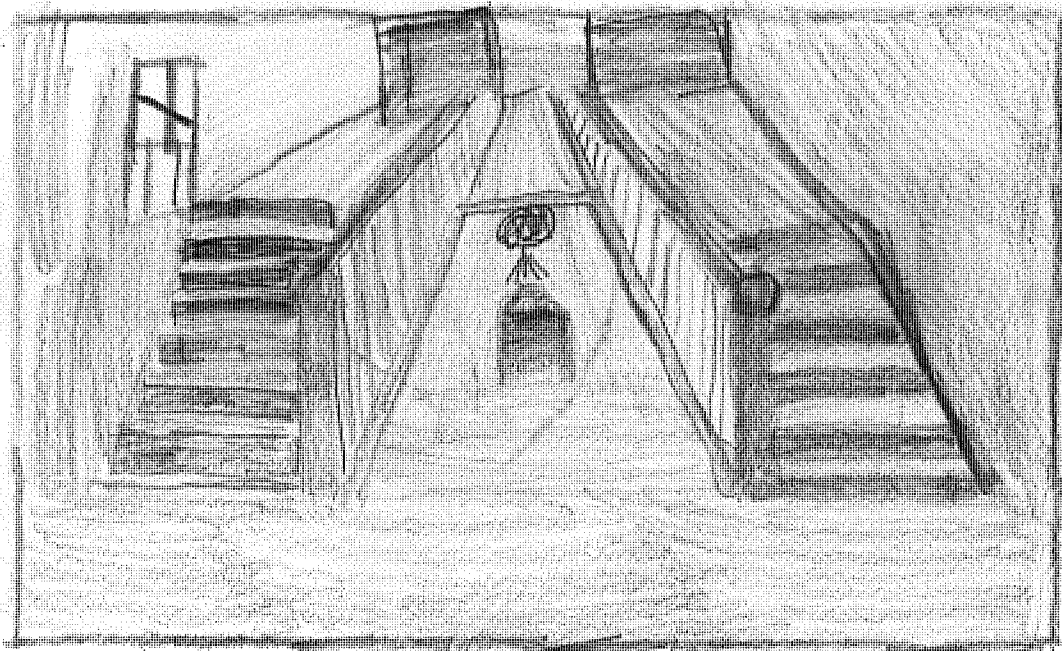

By: Mason

Once upon a time, there was a man who died in his mansion in 1979. The mansion was in a small, quiet neighborhood where there were three boys named Michael, Jordan, and Jack. They loved playing the game Truth or Dare. While playing this game, Michael chose dare, and the dare was to live in the haunted mansion for three days.

On the night they were getting ready, they felt a cold, heavy air. When they stepped inside the house, they felt as if someone was watching them and they felt dizzy. As they were exploring the house, they heard a noise upstairs. They started to get frightened because they knew the house was abandoned and no one would dare to step into the spooky old house.

They immediately went upstairs to check it out, and what they saw was unbelievable. They ran out of the house and dialed 911, but none of them spoke. Soon their families began searching everywhere because the boys were missing.

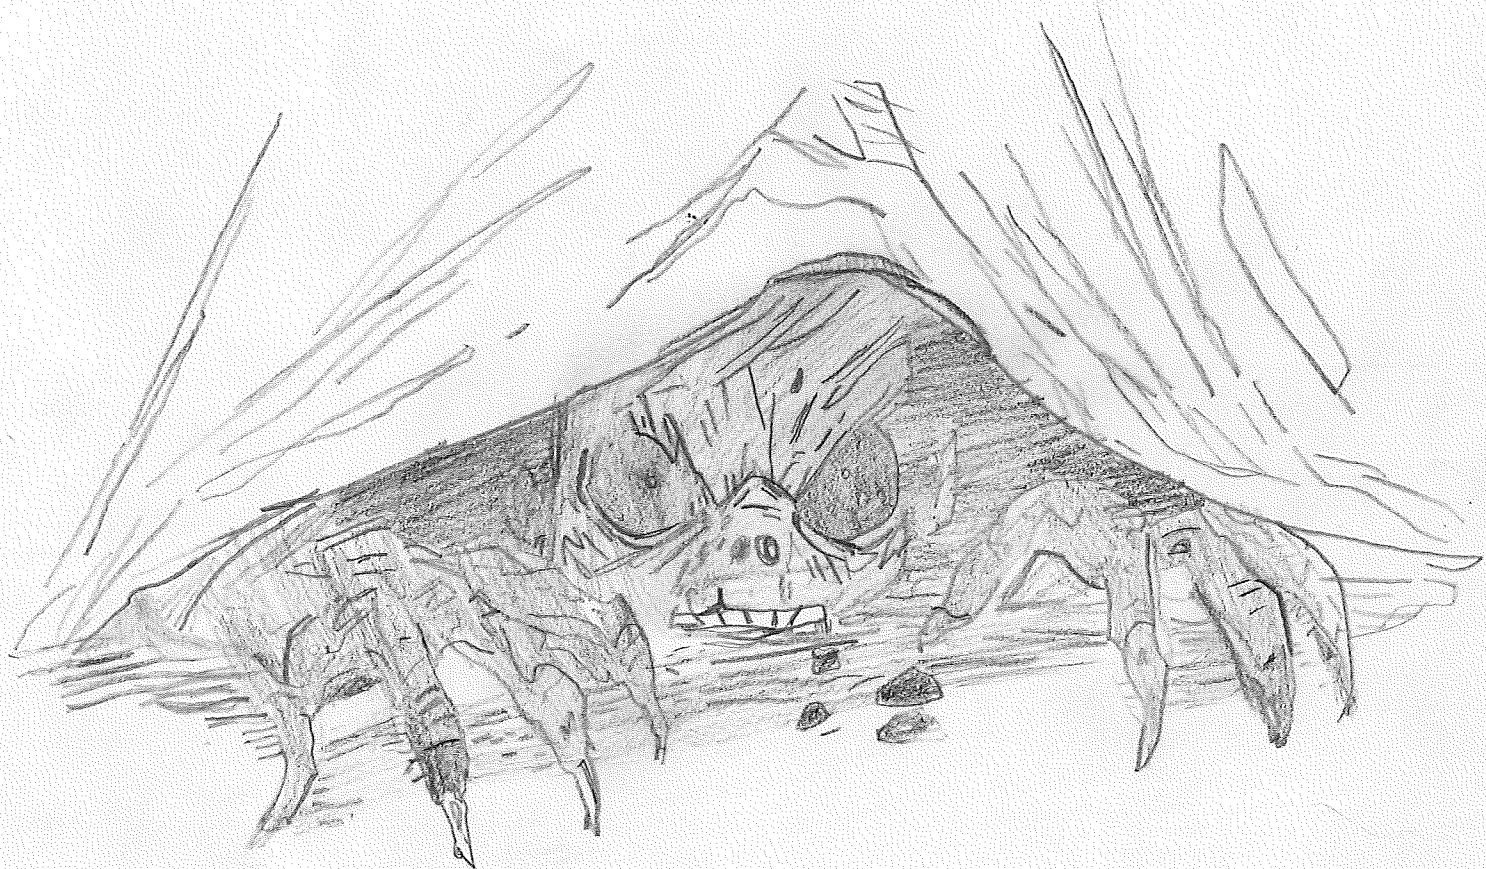

When the families finally looked inside the mansion, they were terrified by what they saw. All three boys were lying dead on the floor, with blood smeared everywhere.

Suddenly they heard a crashing sound in the kitchen. A glass vase had fallen off the table. Then something even stranger happened. A pen started floating in the air and writing on a piece of paper.

The note said it was Michael, Jordan, and Jack. Everyone was shocked to see that their sons were now ghosts. The parents asked how they had died.

The pen began writing: "We were playing truth or dare when Michael chose dare, and we came into this house. We heard a noise upstairs, so we went to investigate. We saw a creepy old man dead on the floor. His body was dragged down the dark hallway by an invisible force until it stopped at a doorway where we saw two shining red eyes. We tried to run away but couldn't move. Then the eyes lunged at us, and that was the moment we realized we had died."

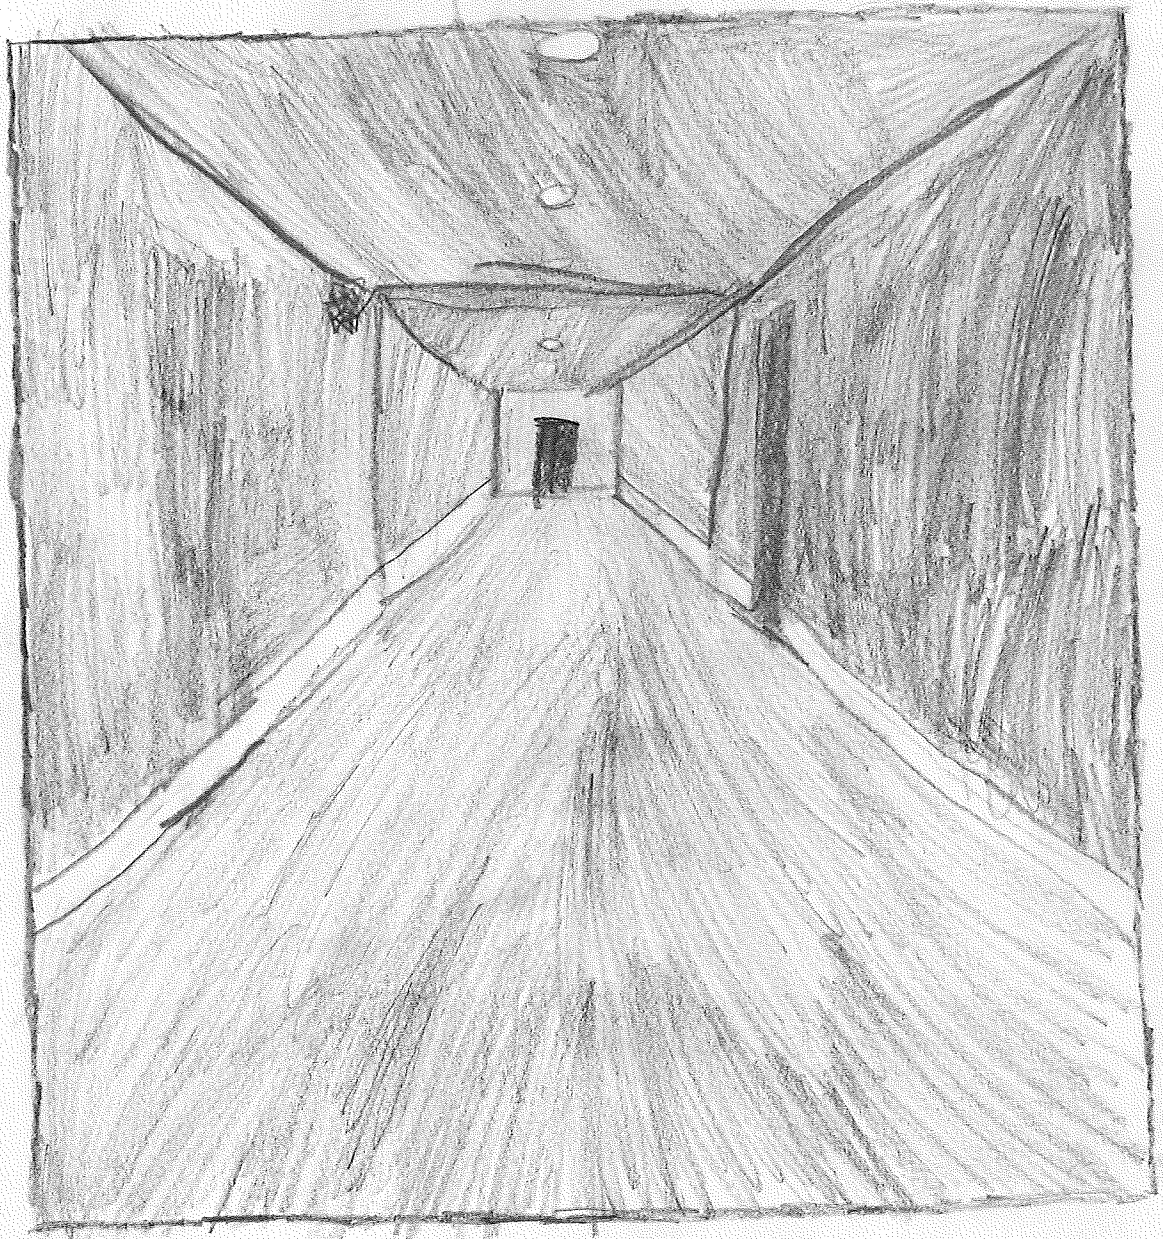

When the parents heard this, they were frightened, but they wanted revenge on whatever killed their boys. They geared up with weapons, armor, and military gear. They tied a soldier to a rope and sent him into the hallway.

Again, they felt the cold air blowing through the house. They saw ten creepy old bodies lying on the floor, and suddenly the bodies began to drag away by themselves.

The soldier shouted into the walkie-talkie, "Drag me out NOW!" The soldiers outside pulled the rope as fast as they could. But when they pulled it all the way back, the rope was covered in blood and the soldier was gone.

Another group of soldiers went into the hallway to investigate. Suddenly they screamed and ran. Only one soldier made it out alive.

The surviving soldier said he saw blood and skeletons everywhere. He also saw two terrifying creatures one with shining bright eyes and another with glowing red eyes.

Everyone was horrified by what they heard. Suddenly they heard a loud screech and saw the monsters themselves. The soldiers opened fire, and the creatures dropped to the floor dead.

Then they saw the ghost of the mansion owner, who quickly vanished into the darkness.

The boys came back to life and later became ghost hunters.

And the spirit of the owner still lives...
