NOVEMBER IN LAS VEGAS

By John Turner,
Interim President & General
Manager, Vegas PBS

November in Las Vegas is one of my favorite months.

As a small child living in Michigan, November was hard to miss. By this time of year, most of the leaves had changed and you knew the first snow probably wasn't too far away. November was the doorway to winter and, more importantly, to the holiday season.

November in Southern Nevada looks a little different. We aren't waiting for the first big snowfall. However, we still notice and appreciate the cooler mornings, the change in weather and that feeling that another year is starting to wind down. In addition to that, November has become a month of reflection.

My dad served in Korea, so Veterans Day was always more than something written on a calendar. There was a personal connection to it. As I've gotten older, I've come to appreciate not only the men and women who serve, but their families who have sacrificed a lot as well.

November is National Native American Heritage Month. That's particularly relevant here, where Native history isn't something from some distant place or time. It's part of the history of the land and communities around us.

Then there's Thanksgiving.

For me, Thanksgiving has always been about family. It means something different as you get older, though. Kids grow up. Families change. People move away. You realize that simply having your loved ones around the same table is something you shouldn't take for granted.

The history of Thanksgiving is more complicated than the version many of us learned as kids, particularly for Native Americans. Recognizing this does not take anything away from our own traditions. We can celebrate and be grateful while being open to understanding someone else's history, experience and their stories they wish to share.

That's what we do at Vegas PBS. We tell stories. As we recognize Veterans Day, Vegas PBS will share programming that honors the stories, service and sacrifice of those who have served our country. And during Native American Heritage Month, Nevada Week will look closer to home, exploring the issues affecting Indigenous communities here.

As we head into the holiday season, I want to thank you for inviting us into your homes, for allowing us to be a small part of your lives, and most of all, for allowing us to be your neighbor.

John Turner

Crime and Punishment

With Geoff Schumacher, The Mob Museum

This November, Vegas PBS premieres Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's Crime and Punishment in America, which mentions the Kefauver Committee, the Senate investigation that held a hearing in Las Vegas in 1950. That's why we're approaching the series through a local lens. Geoff Schumacher, Vice President of Research, Collections and Programs at The Mob Museum, spoke with us for a portion of the interview in the museum's second-floor courtroom, the original federal courtroom where that hearing took place. This is an edited excerpt.

Geoff Schumacher, The Mob Museum

How has crime shaped Las Vegas?

A big part of the economy here was developed by criminals. Organized crime figures came to Las Vegas starting in the 1940s and invested in the casino industry. They were also skimming, taking money off the top and sending it back east. So, there's a good and a bad to it. Ultimately, we collectively determined it was time for the mob to move on. State gaming regulators, local police and federal agencies banded together to push organized crime out and open the door for corporate investment, which is what we see today.

What was Las Vegas like during Prohibition?

A small railroad town, a few thousand people looking for a new reason to exist. Nevada wasn't enforcing Prohibition, so federal agents had to come from San Francisco or Los Angeles, and they could only afford to do that once in a while. Then Hoover Dam construction began in 1931, the same year Nevada legalized gambling. While the country was banning alcohol, Nevada went the other direction.

Was the FBI active in Las Vegas then?

Not yet. Las Vegas was still a very small town, and Reno was a bigger deal. It didn't attract the attention of the FBI or any other outside entities. That changed in the 1940s with World War II, the Army Air Base, which is now Nellis Air Force Base, and the Basic Magnesium plant. Those projects brought tens of thousands of people here. We transformed from a town into a city, and when that happened, the FBI took notice.

What was the Kefauver Committee's effect on Las Vegas?

It didn't shut down gambling in Nevada. It shut down illegal gambling around the country. That gave Las Vegas effectively a monopoly, and the experts from places like Newport, Kentucky, and Saratoga Springs, New York, all migrated here. Kefauver surely thought he might shut down gambling in Nevada, but we saw it as an opportunity more than a hindrance.

What was the most shocking detail from the Las Vegas hearing?

Wilbur Clark was the frontman for the Desert Inn, but the real owners were the Cleveland Syndicate. Asked about his partners, he played dumb, and it wasn't very convincing. Then there was Cliff Jones, part owner of three casinos while serving as lieutenant governor. That may not seem odd to us, but people outside Nevada saw it as reflective of the loose nature of the state.

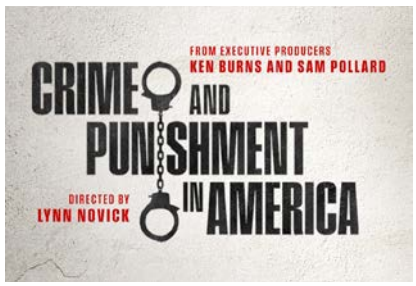

What is Bugsy Siegel's lasting impact?

He was only here for a short time, but his impact is still felt. He understood that people came for the resort experience, not just to gamble. You see that in every resort on the Strip. There's also the dark allure. He was murdered six months after opening the Flamingo, and that created an aura around Las Vegas, this somewhat dangerous, underworld aspect that visitors still sense.

Want to learn who may have killed Bugsy Siegel? Geoff walks through six leading theories in an unsolved case that's still open today.

Secrets of the Dead: Saving Tangier Island

Sunday, November 8 at 9 a.m.

Welcome to tiny Tangier Island in the Chesapeake Bay. Pivotal in the War of 1812, the island has borne witness to key moments in American history. It's where Francis Scott Key wrote the poem that became the lyrics for "The Star-Spangled Banner" and where hundreds of self-emancipated men joined the British to take up arms against their former masters. Now, rising sea levels threaten the island, and the race is on to ensure Tangier will remain a witness to history.

Outdoor Nevada: A Beatty You Never Knew

Saturday, November 21 at 3:30 p.m.

Join host John Burke as he explores Beatty's outdoor adventure, conservation efforts and rare natural events. From mountain bike trails at Spicer Ranch to tree planting for bird habitat at 7J Ranch, discover the region's connection to nature. Witness the unique emergence of the Giuliani dune scarab beetle at Big Dune — a one-of-a-kind event found only in Beatty.

Firelighters: Fire Is Medicine
November 12
Follow the work of women leaders from the Yurok and Karuk Tribes who are building resources to share indigenous practices and create policies to take back indigenous burning rights.

Scha'nexw Elhtal'nexw Salmon People: Preserving a Way of Life
November 19
Despite wildfire smoke and a depleting fishery, Lummi families fish for sockeye salmon. Learn how protecting salmon and this lifeway is a full-time job.

Generations Stolen
November 26
Explore how Native American communities are grappling with the fallout of government policies which separated Native children from their families and stripped them of their culture.

Fire Tender
November 26 at 11 p.m.
This film shares the work of Margo Robbins, a Yurok grandmother and knowledge keeper, as she seeks to return fire practices to Yurok territory.

Stories from the Stage
Mondays at 11:30 p.m.

Cast Your Vote
November 2
On Election Day, things seldom go as planned. Donna discovers herself a foreigner in her own country; M.J. jumps into action when trouble strikes at her polling station; and Eric becomes a viable candidate when another drops out.

On Second Thought
November 9
The bravest choice is often to stop and reconsider. Kate Buhler reevaluates her life after surviving a terrifying midair emergency; Pierce McManus walks away from the New York City Police Academy just before being sworn in; and Johanna Walke finds herself trapped between a cliff and the sea.

Stories from the Stage: Giving Thanks

Truth and Consequences
November 16
Telling the truth can set us free, but it rarely comes without consequences. Sarah Kipp embraces who she is and finds a new way to keep her family together; Quentin Lucas chooses conscience over obedience in the Army; and Christina Semple hides her cancer diagnosis from her family.

Giving Thanks
November 23
Enjoy stories about Thanksgiving. Lani Peterson's cooking mistake becomes a family secret; Melanée Addison tests her adulthood through the ultimate challenge: the Thanksgiving turkey; and Matthew Dicks gathers his courage to stand up to his girlfriend's tough as nails dad.

Think Again
November 30
Real life can be stranger than fiction. Jameer Pond's embarrassing confrontation with Travis Scott earns him a place in hip-hop history; Susan Rohde searches for a bomb at the luxury hotel where she works; and Adam Linn, who is blind, discovers a new sense of freedom driving across the Golden Gate Bridge.
