

The dragon World

by: Louise Zimmerman

Crack! A lone egg in the streets of a city hatched. A dragon egg!
"Where am I?" said a little voice.
A big car rushed past. This isn't dragon world! Where are the other dragons? He crawled off the street.
Then he saw a box. He climbed inside of it. The next thing he knew he was having a dream.

The trees were growing everywhere. Where am I he said?
In dragon land. Said a voice.

And out came another dragon. Go to the magic forest beyond the human city. Find the portal that leads to dragon land. Wait! But the dragon and the dream disappeared. He woke up. It was morning. I better go to the magic forest soon. I can't stand this anymore! "You know," he said. "I'm going to leave today!" So he started off.

He crossed two busy streets.
Whew! That was more tiring than I thought.

But I have to keep on going. Then a thought struck him. I have wings! Wings can make you fly!

Yes! He started flapping his little wings! It started lifting him into the air! Then crash!

He fell down.
Oops this is harder
than I thought!

He tried over and over again.
Crash! Crash! Crash! Ugh! I'm never going to fly! He walked over more and more streets (without wings). Finally he flopped down and went to sleep.

The next morning he tried again.

He flapped his wings. It lifted him into the air! Higher and Higher he went! Then he was soaring across the sky! Yeah! This is great he said! With the help of his wings he found the magic forest!

It was dark but pretty.
He stepped inside. He walked slowly. It got darker, and darker. It seemed like it would never end.

Then he came to a clearing. He heard something. "A bear" he cried.
The bear lunged! The little dragon ran away. He saw something glowing.

The portal! Hea jumped through
it. Im here in dragon lands.
This is the coolest place I've ever seen and its my place.
My home. The End
