Onward and Upward

There's no easy way to say it: 2025 has presented significant challenges for public media.

The loss of federal funding has necessitated tough decisions regarding cost-saving measures, which unfortunately include personnel and non-personnel reductions. However, with these changes now implemented, we're better positioned to serve the people of North Carolina by focusing on what truly matters: sharing meaningful stories, maintaining essential emergency communications and acting as a trusted educational and cultural resource across the state.

Our response to this adversity will define the future of public media in our state for decades to come. I want to assure you that our team is steadfastly committed to our mission.

This fall, we invite you to learn more about our educational engagement through the Rootle Ambassador Program, which now reaches families in all 100 counties in NC. We've also introduced Read-a-roo Zoo, a new online game for children designed to enhance literacy through phonics and the science of reading. Additionally, new seasons of NC Weekend and Best of Our State have begun, along with new Masterpiece dramas and an extraordinary offering from Ken Burns: The American Revolution (more on that on page 14).

For 70 years, PBS North Carolina has persevered. With your continued support, we will not only endure but thrive well into the future.

With gratitude,

David Crabtree, CEO & General Manager, PBS North Carolina

TV ALERT: AN EPIC NEW SERIES FROM KEN BURNS

Beginning Sunday, November 16, watch The American Revolution, Ken Burns' new six-part, 12-hour documentary series about the country's founding struggle, the eight-year War for Independence and how these events turned the world upside-down.

- 7 PM: Ken Burns sits down with PBS NC's David Crabtree on Focus On.
- 8–10 PM: The American Revolution kicks off with part 1, which covers May 1754 to May 1755. As political protest escalates into violence, war gives 13 colonies a common cause. Subsequent episodes air every night this week at 8 PM on PBS NC.
