

Queen Baba Cat and the Poison Mice

by Arden [REDACTED]

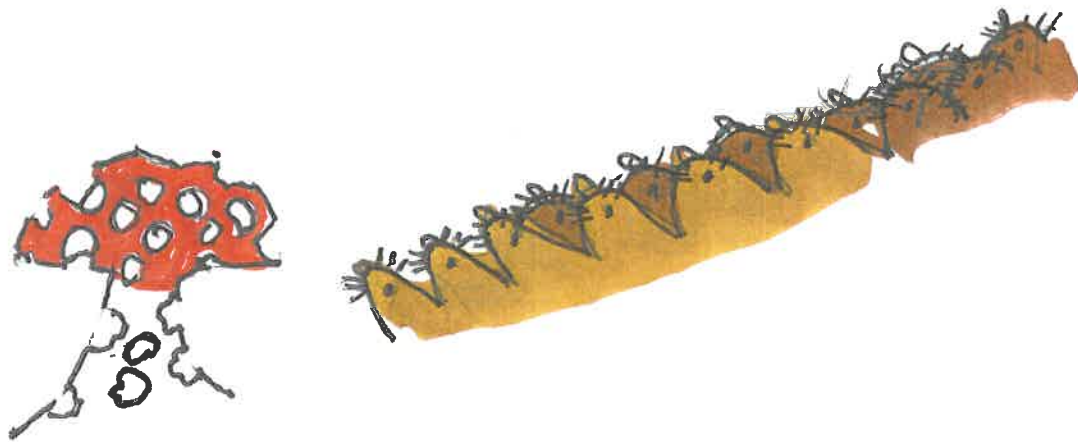

Once upon a time, there was a cottage. And next to the cottage there was a mushroom.

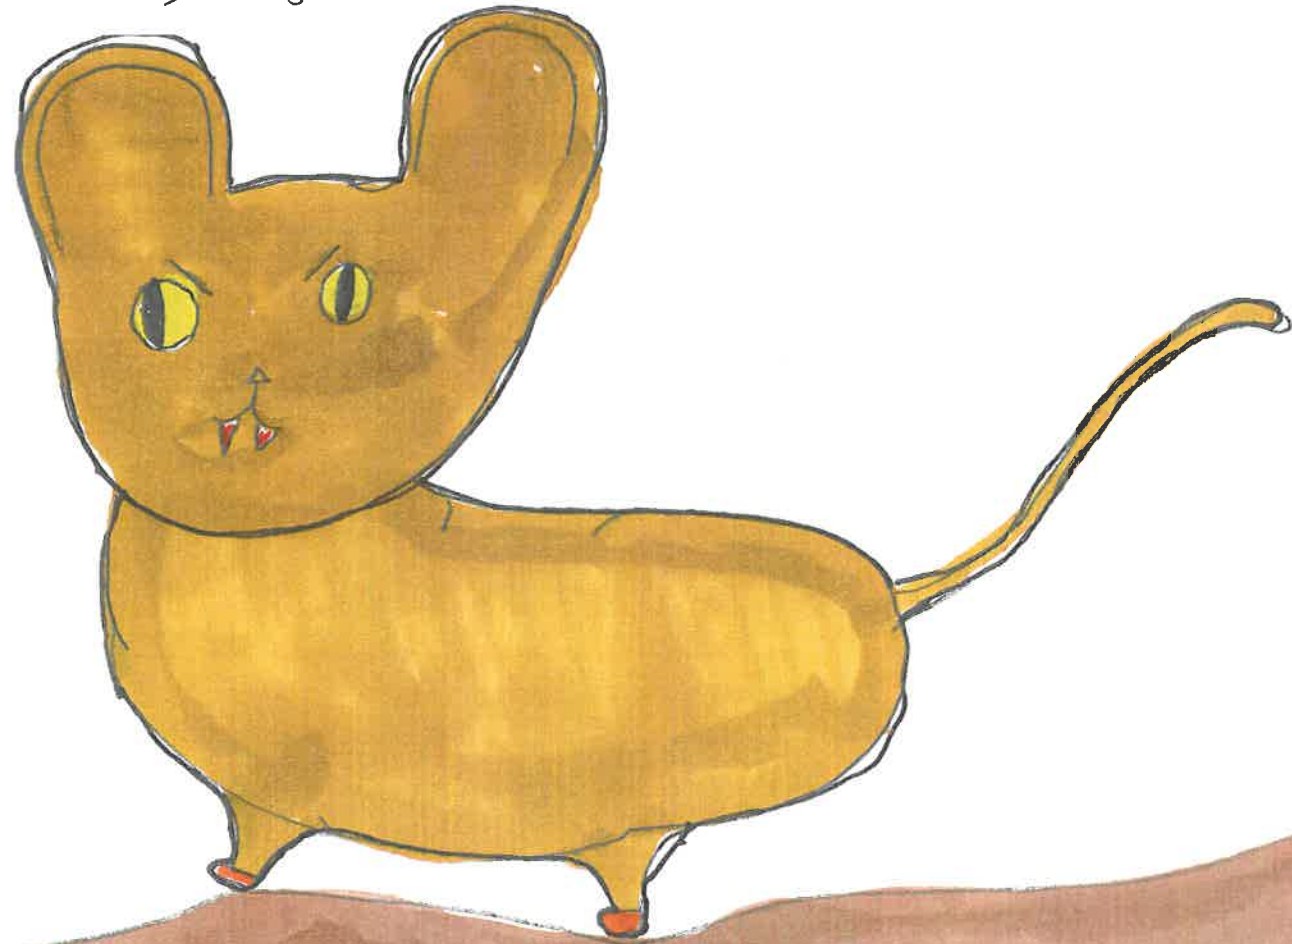

Along came a mouse. And it took a nibble of the mushroom.

He called another mouse, who called another mouse, and another and another until there were fourteen mice! All fourteen mice took a bite of the mushroom. But then...

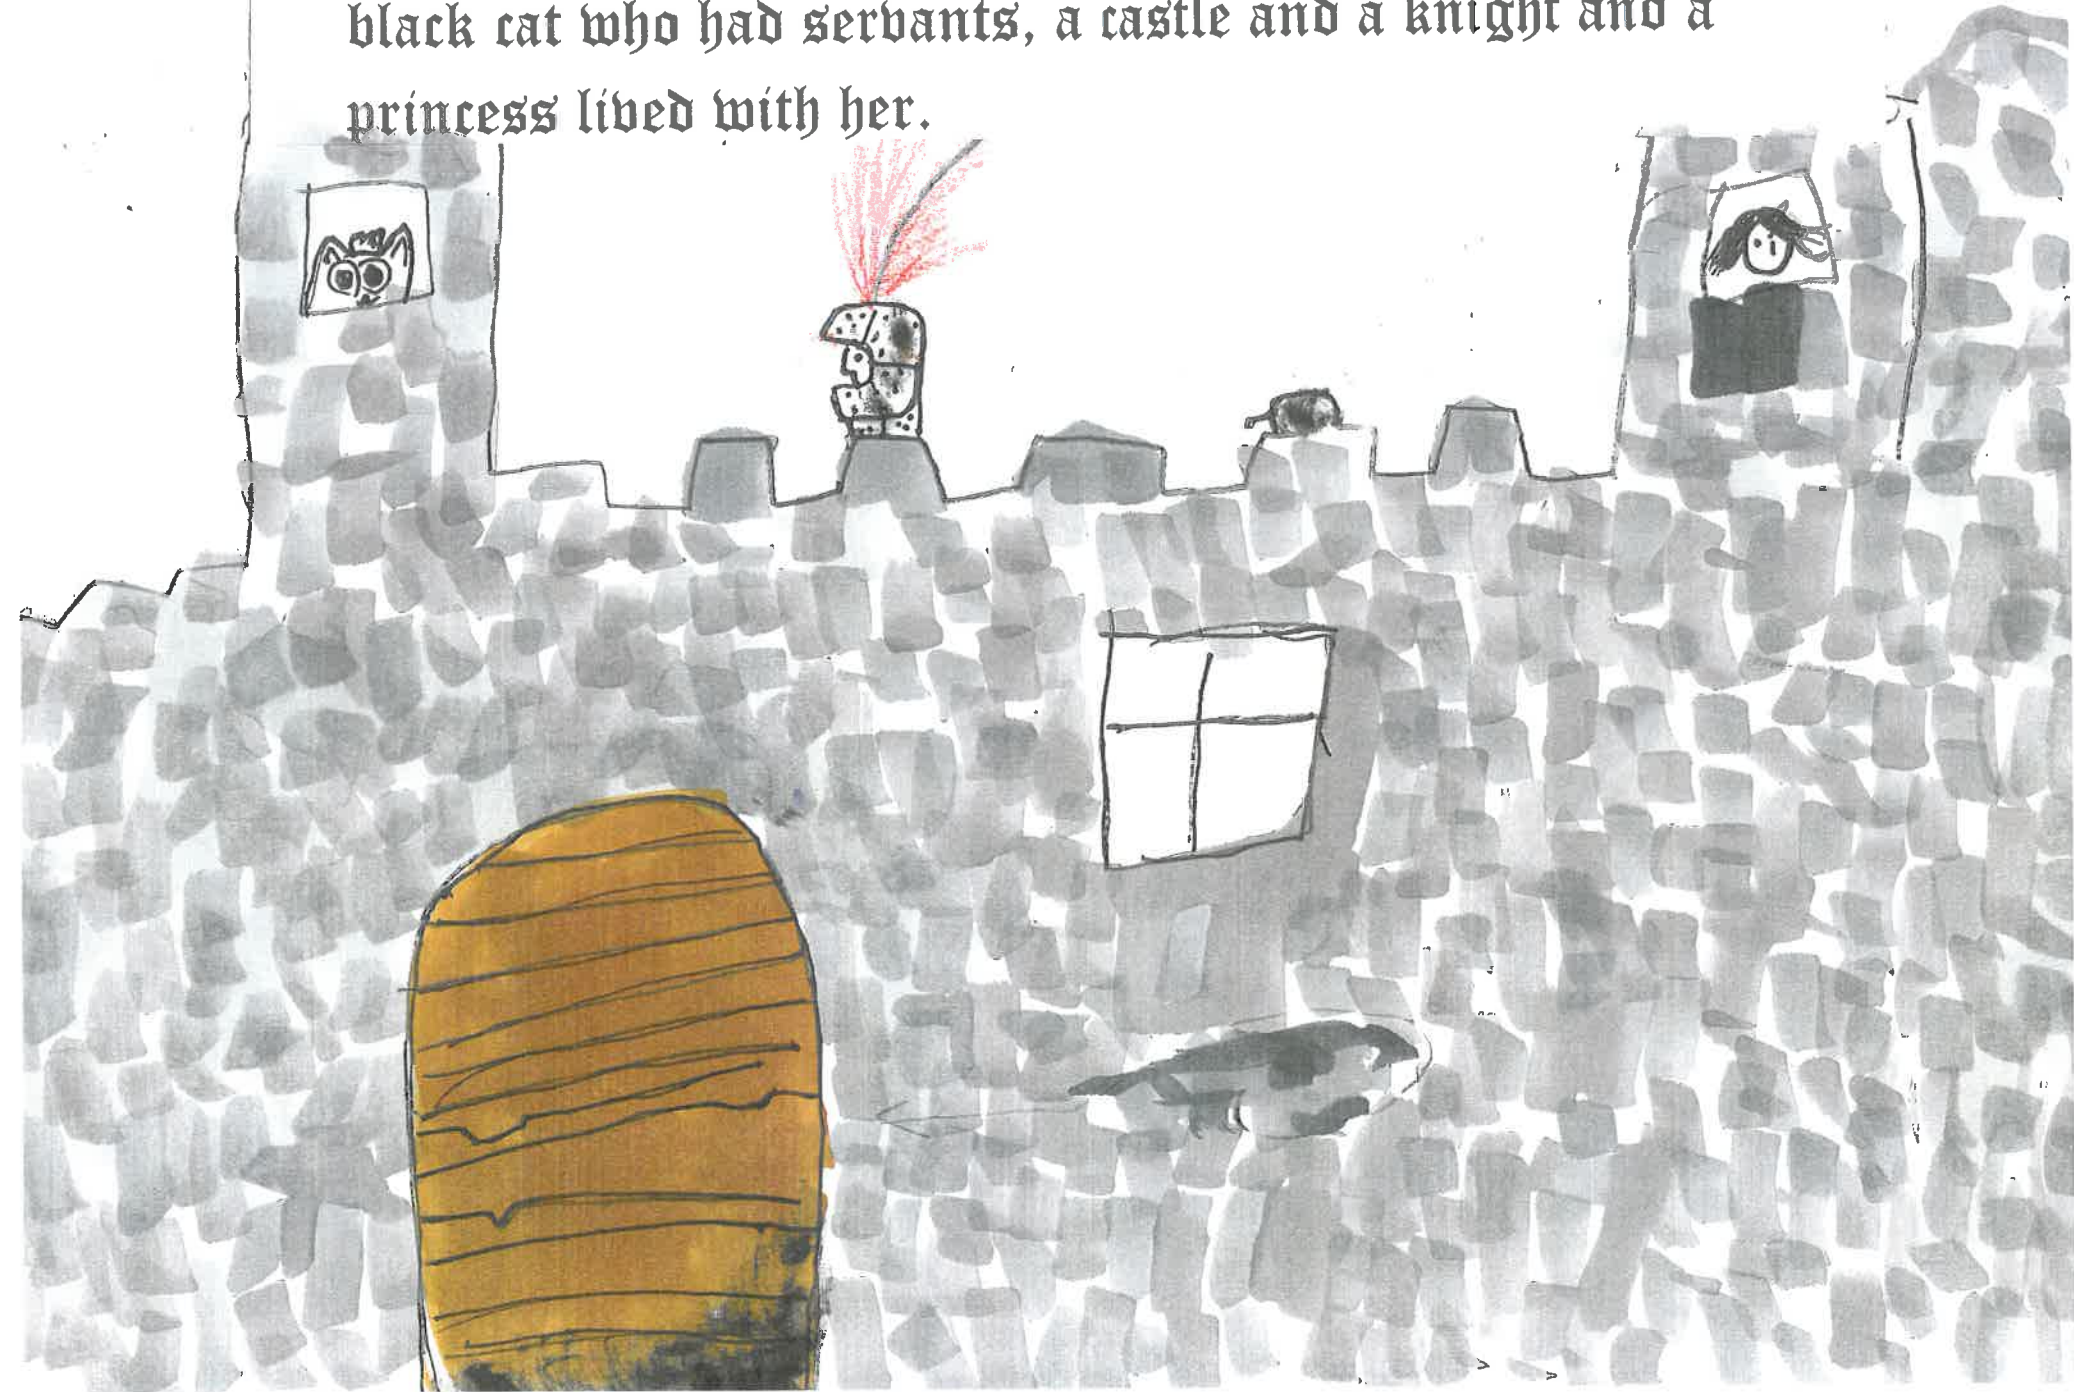

They started to jiggle, they started to wiggle - they became poison mice! They grew long fangs (dripping with blood), green eyes that glowed, and they started to head towards the city.

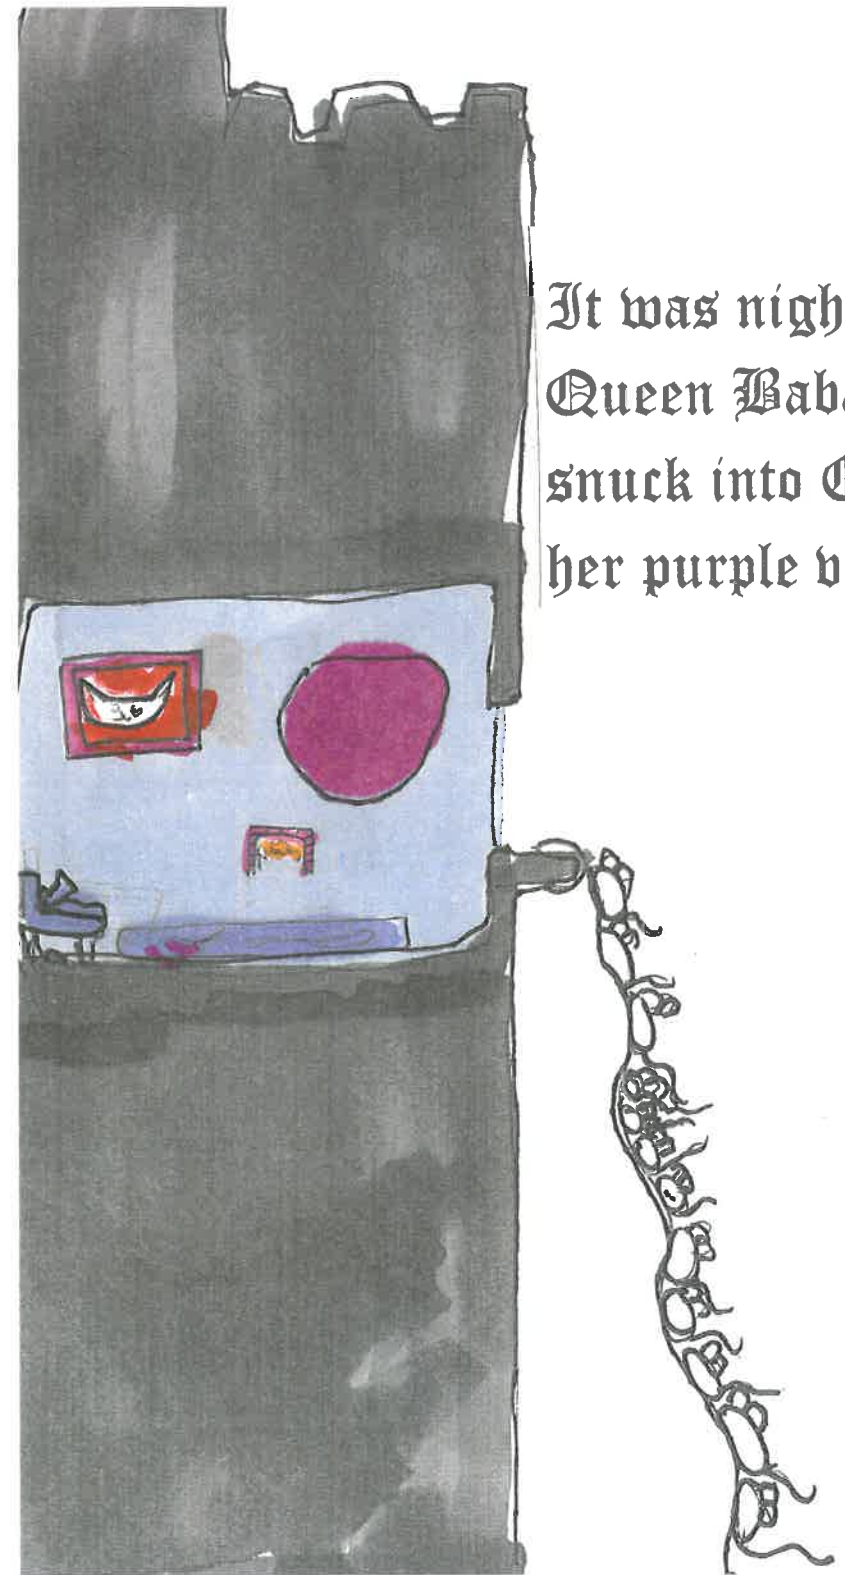

The people of the city looked at them and laughed. They thought, "They can't hurt us - they are only mice in creepy little costumes." But they were wrong!

The mice continued on...they were headed to Queen Baba Cat's castle. Queen Baba Cat was a beautiful black cat who had servants, a castle and a knight and a princess lived with her.

It was nighttime when the mice arrived at the castle of Queen Baba Cat. The mice climbed the castle wall and snuck into Queen Baba Cat's room. She was asleep in her purple velvet bed.

Eye mice began to dance around Queen Baba Cat singing, "Mice! Mice! Poison Mice! Bite us and you'll be like us!" Queen Baba Cat started to wake up...

Little did the mice know that Queen Baba Cat had a little ring on her kitty finger, and if she turned it - it would signal the knight!

So she turned it...

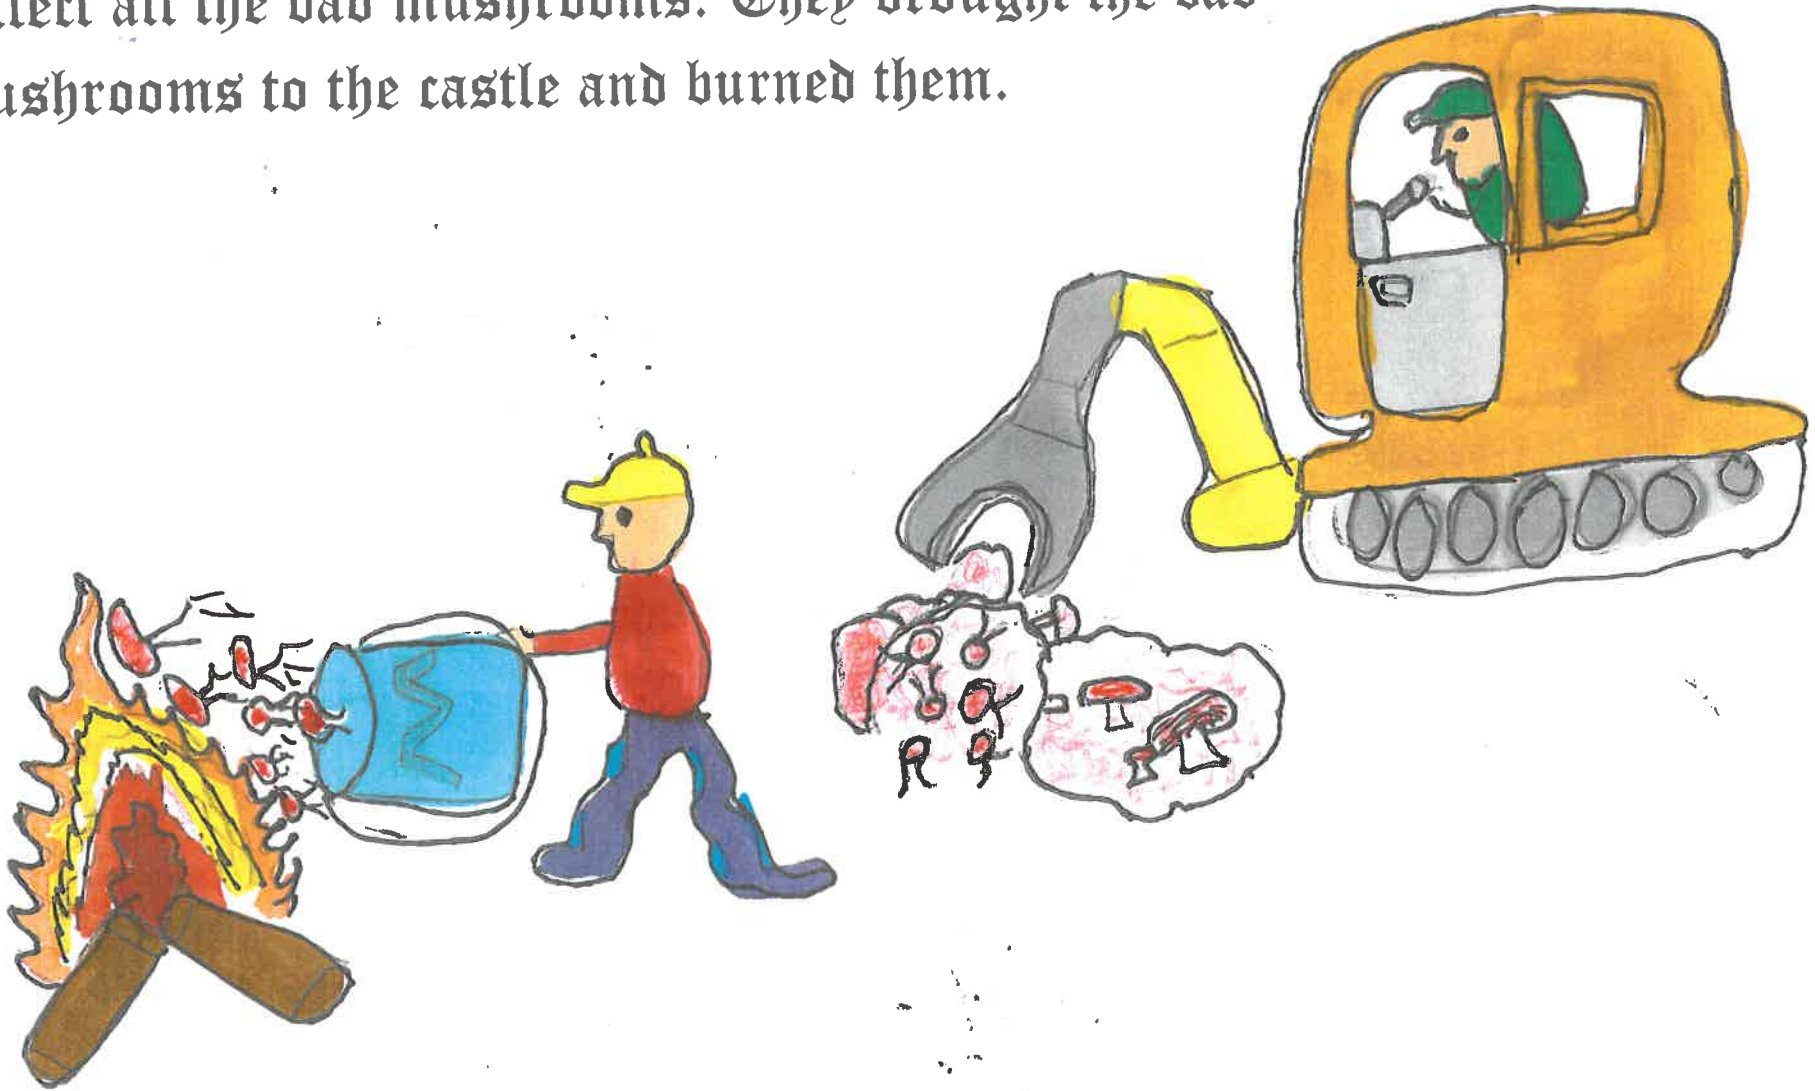

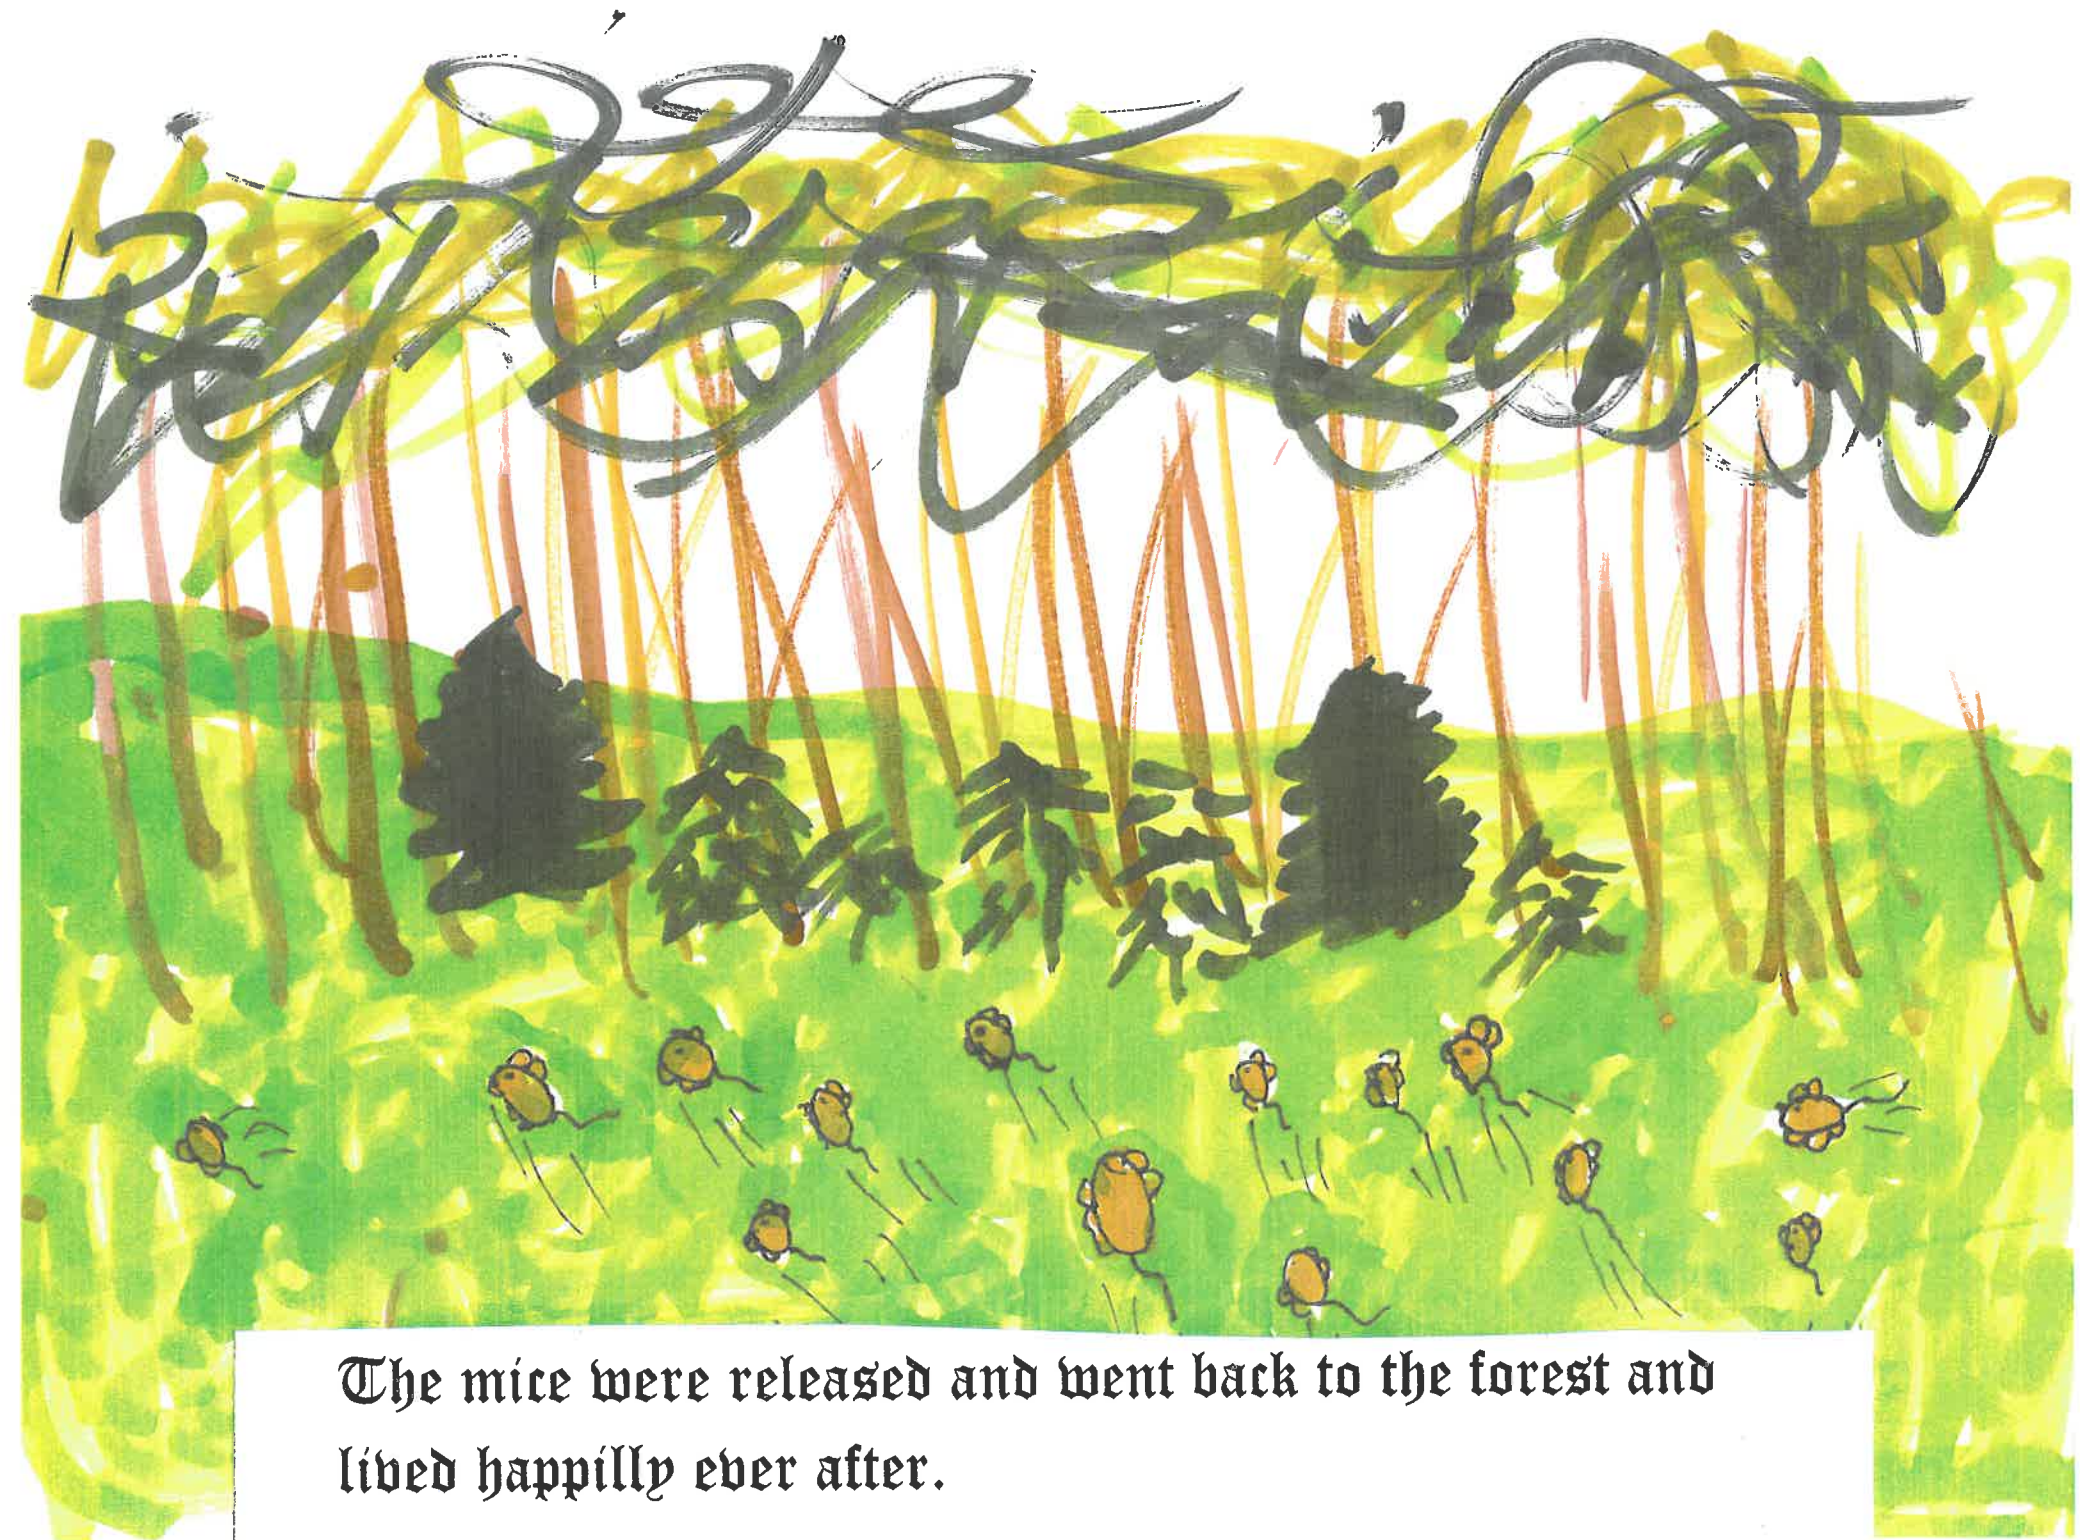

The knight came running with a rope and a big sack! He burst into the room and ran around scooping every mouse up into the big sack.

Queen Baba Cat was a good queen, and she knew that mint leaves would cure the mice. So they locked the mice in a cage and fed them mint leaves until they were all well.

The knight had his servants go out to the cottage and collect all the bad mushrooms. They brought the bad mushrooms to the castle and burned them.

The mice were released and went back to the forest and lived happily ever after.
