The toaster was making toast for his owner.

The cat was chasing his tail.

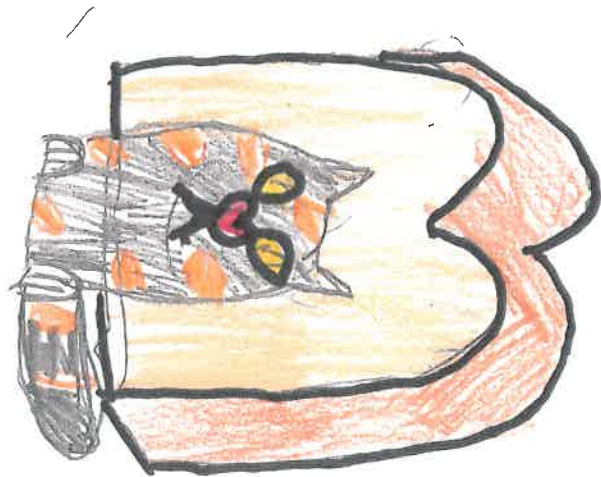

The owner was coming down the stairs to get his bread.
He went to get his toast out of the toaster.

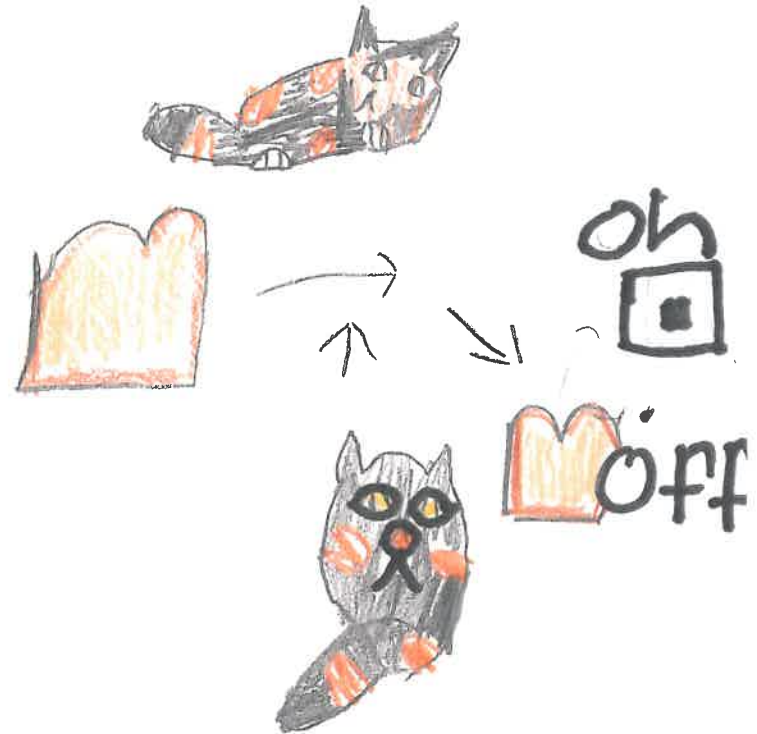

The cat was chasing his tail wildly, which made the toaster mad. The toaster started the toast fight.

The cat pounced. Missed. And landed on a flat piece of toast.

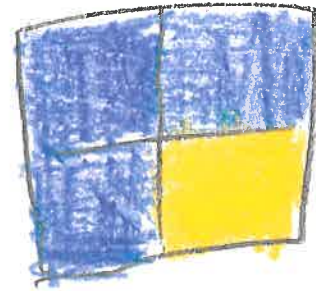

The toaster threw one of his toasts.
Missed, hitting the light switch and turned off the lights.

The owner went screaming around, throwing his coffee. The cat got a splotch, but dodged it, smacking the toaster with its tail.

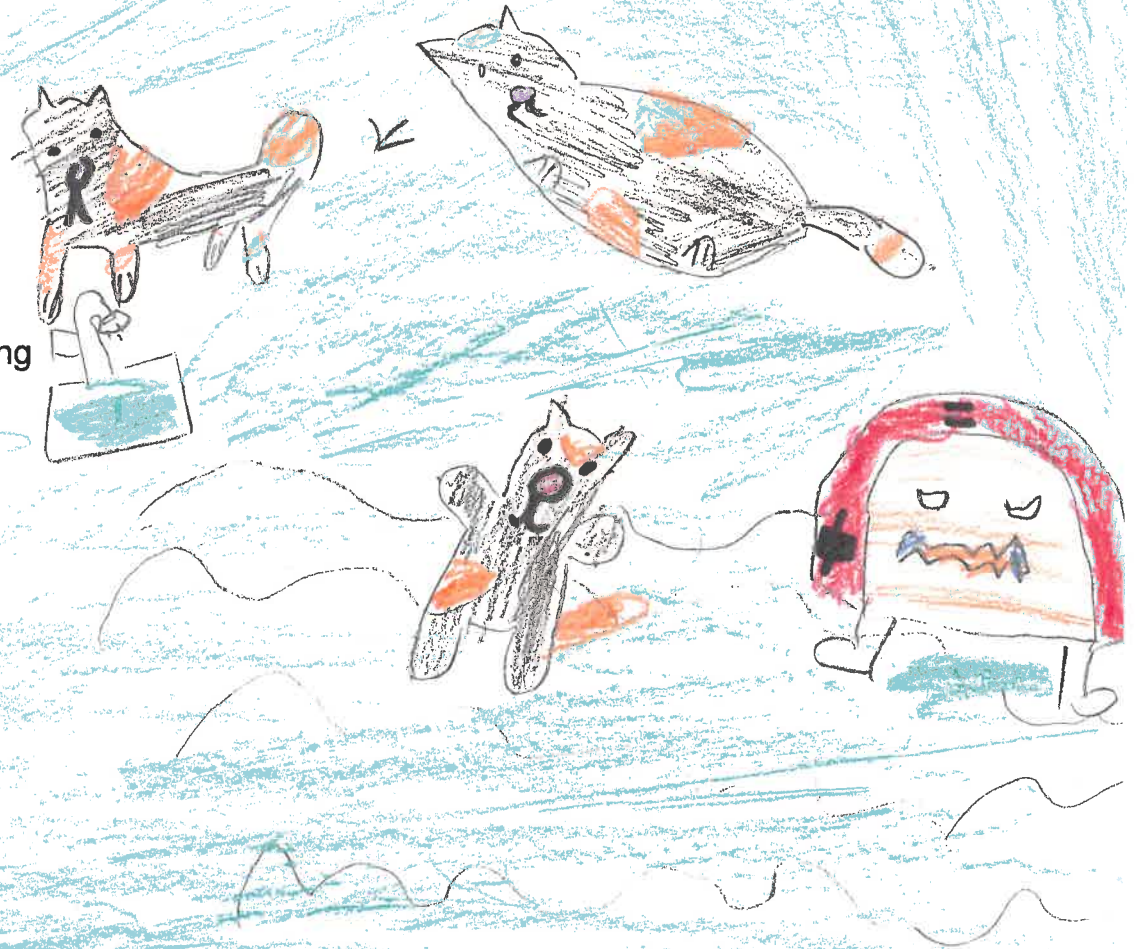

The toaster was getting angrier.

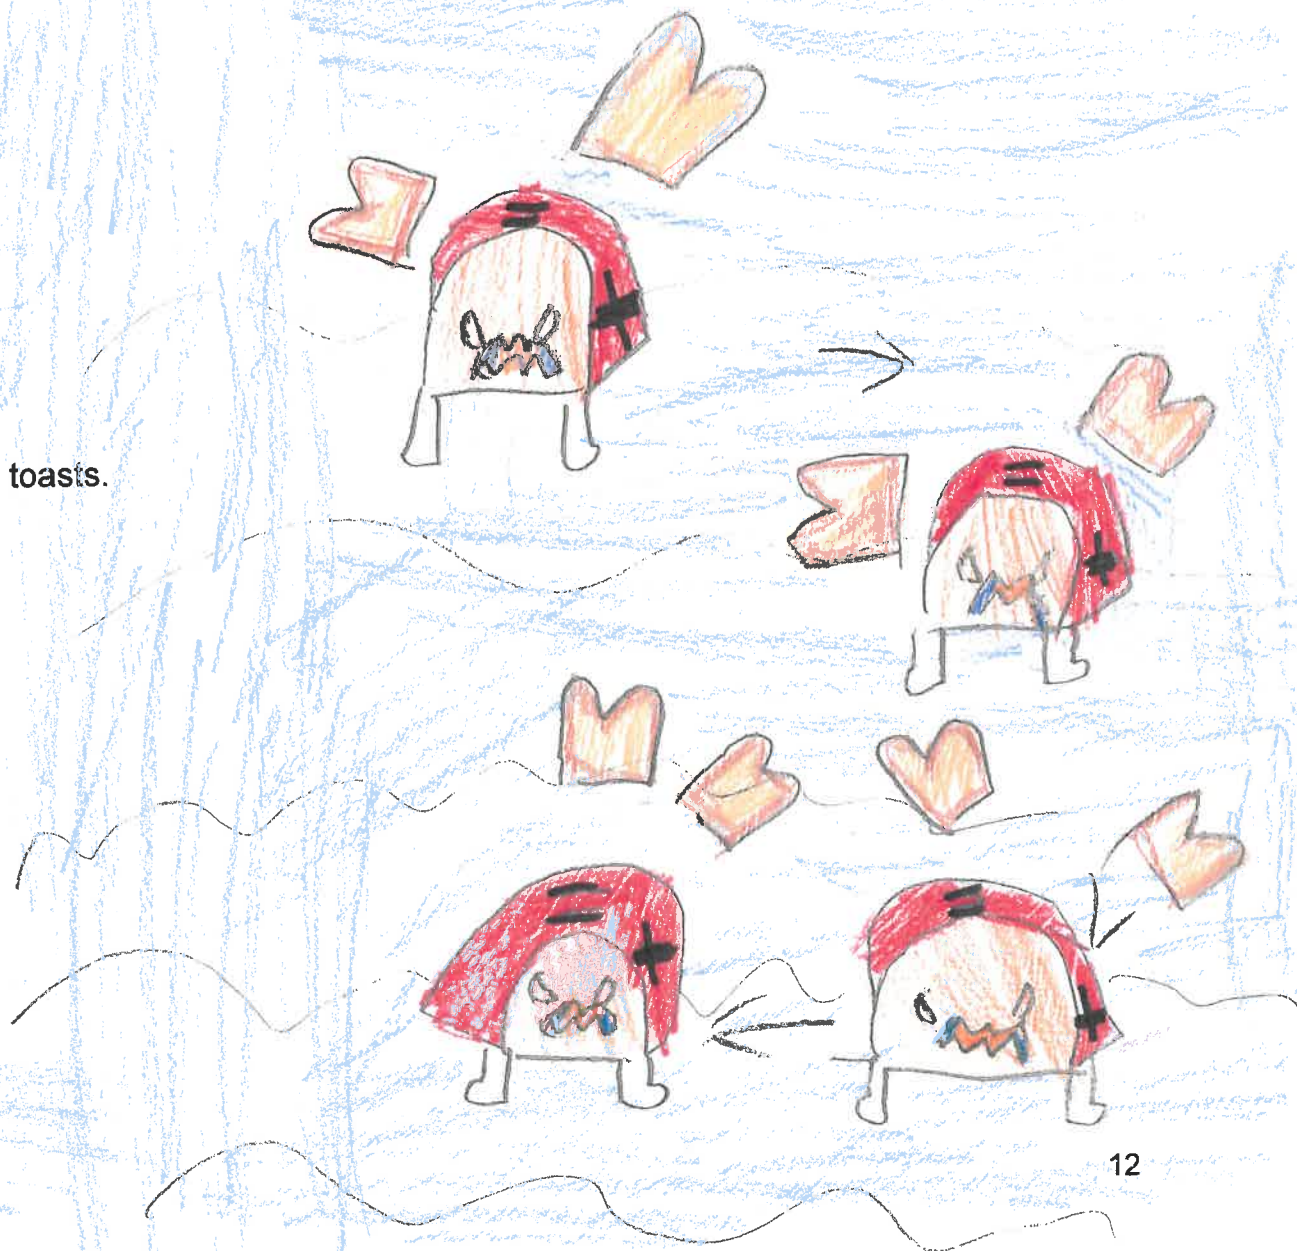

The cat pounced on the toaster, but also hit the sink making it overflow. Now the cat was swimming to try to slash the toaster.

The toaster threw a wet sloppy toast.

Then the toaster malfunctioned.
It started flying around and spitting out toasts.

The cat took one leap and the toast was flying everywhere, about to run out of batteries.

The cat was almost about to win, when the battery shot out of the toaster bouncing off the cat.

Trophy!

The battery smashed the toaster.

It was dead.

The cat won.
